

Studies & Hamburg Opera Years 1888-1916

Watch for surprises: the final scene from Salome; Mahler's Symphony No. 4, and Mahler songs with Bruno Walter at the piano; Mussorgsky's Songs and Dances of Death; and rarely heard operas such as Pfitzner's Palestrina, Bittner's Die Kohlhaymerin, or Kienzl's Der Kuhreigen.

I have taken the path of least resistance when it comes to opera titles, using the English form of familiar operas such as Marriage of Figaro, Magic Flute, Tales of Hoffmann, Merry Wives of Windsor, etc. The opera names and Lied cycles should be italicized, but that hasn't been done in this Chronology. The Lied names should be within quotes, but again, that hasn't been done. Also, as a space-saving measure, when a Lied has been referred to, I have chosen to use an abbreviated version: "Willst du dein Liebsten sterben sehen" becomes "Willst du..."

It may appear to be a typo, but the Germans call Butterfly's Pinkerton, "Linkerton," and though Faust is called Margarethe in German speaking lands, I leave it as Faust in this chronology.

During the Hamburg Opera years there were performances in Altona which was then a suburb of Hamburg, and these are noted. The Metropolitan Opera, Vienna Opera, and Chicago Opera toured and the city of those performances is also provided.

The performers (singers and conductors) are listed with their given names the first times they appear. Opera composers' names are given the first time the opera is listed; the same applies to Lied composers. Lehmann's name is abbreviated LL; her regular pianists: Ernő Balogh: EB, Paul Ulanowsky: PU; Bruno Walter: BW; Gwendolyn Williams Koldofsky: GK.

The three digit numbers referencing a performance, recording, interview, etc., refer to the Discography found in Volume I of the iBook, or on the Lotte Lehmann League website: Documentation

When you read (!) or (sic) it means something incredible like multiple performances on one day.

Maclennan, Siegmund; Lohfing, Hunding; Lattermann, Wotan; Fleischer-Edel, Brünnhilde; Metzger, Fricka; Meyrowitz, cond., Hamburg Opera; in the 10 Jan 1914 edition of the Hamburgischer Correspondent: “Yesterday, Miss Lotte Lehmann sang the role of Sieglinde for the first time, and already yesterday, she was Sieglinde through and through. The virginally womanly Sieglinde, as seen by the poet's eye, not that of the theater. The task that the first act presents at its beginning to the performer of this role cannot be met with stagecraft or routine. Only truly genuine inner participation can enliven the silent, outwardly uneventful span of time there.
And Lotte Lehmann managed it entirely without the aids of routine or technique.
Quite un-routined, quite touchingly awkward at first, her hands were in the way—and then unexpectedly became clever, eloquent hands that helped to speak the touching language of the inner experience. It was no different with her singing. Entirely apart from everything vocal-technical—as flawlessly and surely as it was handled—the musical experience attained a deeply internal, moving effect.”

Hamburger Zeitung: “Her style, which imitates no model and which no other can easily imitate, is far removed from everything that tastes of routine, from everything that tastes of convention, and yet just as far from any affectation, from any eccentricity. It is the simple result of a steady artistic instinct that allows itself to be distracted by nothing and so always hits upon the right thing. Lotte Lehmann has the rare ability, the rare courage, to also stand still on stage—quite still, without posing, without the embarrassed movements of routine, without rolling eyes, without the substitutes for true temperament. And in this simple calm, which belongs to life itself, she is indeed more natural and effective than all the pause-filling routine is ever able to be.”
